Project Spotlight

Congratulations to the Southern California SitOnIt Seating sales team for working with California State University of Fullerton to create a budget-conscious revamp for their new residence halls and dining facility.

ABOUT THE PROJECT

In February 2011, California State University of Fullerton chose OM Workspace to assist them in finding the most budget-conscious, attractive yet durable seating for their largest-ever housing and dining construction project. The $143 million facility opened on August 16, 2011. The dormitory provides housing for 1,900 students - more than doubling the campus' residential population - while the Gastronome, a 565-seat contemporary dining facility, offers a diverse eatery.

WHAT MADE THE DIFFERENCE?

California State University of Fullerton ultimately chose SitOnIt Seating because of our budget-friendly seating solutions, as well as its prior selection of and pleasant experience with SitOnIt Seating's Focus Work and Focus Work stool products. In addition, the materials, COM ability and warranty all proved to be large factors in the university's decision to purchase from the Composium collection.

WHAT'S NEXT?

With the success of the California State University of Fullerton's housing and dining complex, OM Workspace has been approached to work with other universities, including a $4 million deal with San Diego State University. Furthermore, our Southern California sales team is working with several other colleges and universities on standard programs, leveraging this California State University of Fullerton project as a testament to our value proposition of providing great design at an affordable price.
